Reading Matter on every page

The Journal and Bishop Spalding.

The Journal continues its skirmishing tactics against the reply of Bishop Spalding, published in our columns. The editor thinks it "tedious" to go over the whole ground of the discussion, does not tire of patty assaults on the outskirts. In his second article he is as unfair and as inaccurate, as he was in the first. He has no idea referring to "the grave issue," but he seeks to amuse his readers at the Bishop's expense. It has the amusement may turn in another direction.

The Bishop had referred to the politeness of "Young Europe" as strikingly superior to that of "Young America;" and he had adduced facts and specifications in support of his position, which have forcibly struck many travelers in Europe no matter what may have been the shade of the religious opinions.

The Journal, with great unfairness, generalizes the statement, and heads his article "Bishop Spalding on American Manners."

Now the Bishop had spoken of "Young America" whose remarkable characteristics, especially cities, are pretty generally known. We should him to refer chiefly to that class of boy unashamedly too numerous and steadily on the increase, who follow our streets, and whose respect for age and authority, even parental, is an thing but remarkable. Such a class is seldom seen in the cities of the European continent, all candid travelers, who have at all examined the subject, will be prepared to admit. We have never heard any such complaint of rudeness among the European boys and girls whom they meet in their travels abroad.

We do not mean to say that the Bishop's argument based on the fact, was a very strong or conclusive one; but we do mean to say that the Journal should have been at least fair and honest in stating the fact on which it was based. We do not see what the calling of "old bachelors and an old spinster" had to do with the argument.

This was thrown in, we suppose, as "a sop to Caribou," like several other things in the same article of the Journal. Every discerning man who saw a glance at that tactics, instead of strong tent, tend greatly to weaken the cause which the Journal has espoused; d. God help our common schools as at present conducted, if they can have no more endurable advocates than the Journal! They could better afford to bear the opposition of the Bishop than such chumpionship, at least so far as it has been heretofore exhibited in the editor's rejoinder.

The Journal has indeed created amusement, but it has been at its own expense. If the Journal designer, defending our schools from the attacks of the Bishop, let it be done in a manly, fair and open way, by the use of valid arguments, and the production of telling facts, or else let there be no further attempts at defending them.

CHILLS! CHILLS! CHILLS!

A dispute from Washington brings us the intelligence that the Spanish mission has been offered to the Hon. Wm. Preston, of Kentucky, to be the next Governor of the State. We have good reason to think that he received the offer, and accepted it, and we believe that he has no objection to it. We are anxious to have him appointed to the office, and we hope that he will be appointed to it.

He is a man of great talents, and the distinguished gentleman and the elegant lady for whom the ball is given, appreciate the value of a prominent place in the great heart of a generous and patriotic people.

From the Russellville Herald—K. N. X.

Many little Democrats in Kentucky are extremely desirous of the nomination for Governor, will doubtless be greatly rejoiced to learn that their formidable rival for the office of the State, and their chief antagonist, has been removed from the field.

He is a man of great talents, and the distinguished gentleman and the elegant lady for whom the ball is given, appreciate the value of a prominent place in the great heart of a generous and patriotic people.

This public demonstration at the home of Col. Preston, and on the part of those with whom his years from infancy to the present time have been spent, is a fitting finale to the popular voice which called upon him to be the next Governor of Kentucky. The Democratic press of the State, with unprecedent unanimity, spoke of him as the favorite candidate for Governor, and it was the opinion of leading Democrats everywhere, that he would be nominated without difficulty, and elected by such a majority as was never given to any man in the State. The thing seemed to be fixed, and none objected except an occasional rascal who was not willing to see the field thus swept over by the gallant Preston.

In the midst, however, of his anticipated gubernatorial honors, the President tendered him the Spanish mission. Of course he could not refuse, for there was a chance for Cuba, and if this island could, by a lucky turn of Fortune's wheel, be added to our Union, more good would thereby be done his party and his country than could be achieved in the executive chair of the State. His friends acquiesced in his acceptance of the Spanish mission or of any other mission in the executive gifts.

From the Richmond Messenger—K. N. X.

Col. Preston has accepted the Spanish mission, and will leave for Madrid in a short time; but the people of Kentucky are determined that he shall go under circumstances that will permit him to pass from their memory.

Our present and prospective relations with Spain require the presence of a able, sagacious, discreet, and skillful diplomat, as the representative of this government in the Spanish mission. Spain is the owner of the Island of Cuba, and such, requires to be managed. The annexation of Cuba, however, is a question of opinion, as is the question of the right of intervention. The Spanish mission, however, is a question of opinion as to the man who is to be sent to the Spanish mission, and the great achievement is destined to see a lasting name in the name of the President who administered it.

The President, however, of his appointment, shall be the man who is to be sent to the Spanish mission.

He is a man of great talents, and the great achievement is destined to be fully developed in his forthcoming message at the next session of Congress.
